

Are You Making Any of These 6 Mistakes While Editing Your Thesis?

Written by Admin

Tuesday, 30 August 2016 10:45 - Last Updated Friday, 04 January 2019 05:16

Editing is one of the most vital phases of preparing your dissertation. Even if you have prepared your dissertation to the best of your ability and have included surprising research findings, still if you do not do the editing properly, it can result in dissertation rejection. The first draft of your dissertation involves simply getting all your ideas and research onto the paper. Then you require to organize, revise and proofread it. But, do you know that often PhD scholars make common mistakes when editing their thesis. To avoid these mistakes, get to know about the 6 mistakes which is often done while editing your thesis.

1.Using wrong academic format

Always remember that nowadays universities lay down their specific format which you have to strictly follow. Most of the universities now recommended APA or ASA style of formatting. But large numbers of PhD scholars either ignore or overlook it, which is actually a big mistake. Your thesis can get rejected solely on the fact that you have used the wrong academic mistake.

2.Ignoring lengthy sentence formations

If you read editing or writing tips by expert scholars, you will always find them suggesting the use of short sentences. If you write precise and short sentences, it will keep the reader interested. But if you use lengthy sentences it can lead to confusion and the reader may not be able to understand what you are trying to say. So, while editing do not make the mistake of ignoring lengthy sentence formations and correct them.

3.Nor abiding by the formatting guidelines

If you do not abide by the formatting guidelines like line spacing, font size, margin placement etc., you can cost you big. So, while editing your dissertation, make sure that you perfectly consider the formatting guidelines and strictly adhere to it.

Are You Making Any of These 6 Mistakes While Editing Your Thesis?

Written by Admin

Tuesday, 30 August 2016 10:45 - Last Updated Friday, 04 January 2019 05:16

4.Unclear references

When editing your dissertation, do not leave unclear references. Instead, check that the references mentioned are clear and written in the format mentioned by your university.

5.Ignoring misspelled words

It is very common to ignore misspelled words as you remain focused on formatting and checking out sentence formation. Give proper attention to the spellings and instantly correct when you notice any spelling error.

6.Overlooking Incorrect use of pronouns

Ensure that you do not make incorrect use of pronouns. When editing, do not overlook incorrect pronoun usage and swiftly correct it on the go!